

Judged wrong.

"Ahhhh! No please you can't take her!" Ray yelled until she couldn't yell no more. That was two months ago, now she is being accused to have something to do with her sisters' disappearance. She is a ten year old girl named Rachel, Ray for short.

"How could you think I would do something like that! She was my only sister! I didn't do it!" Ray yelled, stomping her foot and running out of the kitchen after fighting with her mother. Later that night after dinner, her dad told her "Ray, we are gonna send you to the other side."

"What! Why!" Exclaimed Ray

"You know why." Her father stated patiently. Her mother just sat there, arms crossed, staring at her empty plate.

"Mom you're gonna let him do this?" asked Ray

"Yes." Declared her mother, then she stood up and walked away without saying anything else, knowing it was probably the last time she would ever see Ray.

"Pack your bags I'm taking you in the morning, goodnight." With that her dad went to sleep. In the morning as Ray and her dad walked toward the other side, Ray asked, "why are you doing this? I'm your only daughter left."

"Yes, but it's for the best. Listen, this town was beautiful, until the day the first poster of your sister went up, the mayor wanted to keep quiet so none of us went into chaos but nooooo, you had to put up that poster!" Yelled her dad.

"Yeah cuz' the mayor wasn't doing anything about it." Ray yelled back.

"You know what?..... This town was perfect before you were born! It had greener trees, quiet streets, and peaceful days and now..... It's just chaos." Replied her dad, throwing his hands in the air. That kept Ray quiet the rest of the way. When they got to the edge of the river, there was a small paddle boat and an old man waiting for her. The old man was going to take her to the other side.

"Get in Rachel, and good bye." With that said, her dad walked off after paying the man for his service.

"Get in child, I will take you across the river and you will walk the rest of the way." Whispered the old man. There was no talking as they crossed the river. When they got across the river, Ray thanked the man and got her luggage. No one had ever come back from the other side, all she new about it was that it was where they sent people that had done something bad, like she was being accused of. As she walked to the other side, she wondered what it would be like and hoped she would some day see her sister again. When she finally got there, she was amazed at what she saw. Houses, people, and animals Ray loved it. She kept walking until she was spotted by someone.

"Hi what did you do? By the way I'm James." Greeted a boy about a couple years older than her.

"I'm Ray, I was accused of having something to do with my sisters disappearance. Sky, was her name." replied Ray.

"Sky..... I've heard that name before somewhere..... Does she by any chance have brown eyes and brown hair?" Asked James.

"Yes! Have you seen her? Do you know where she is?" Asked Ray desperately.

"Let's go! I'll take you to her," invited James. With that they went to a tiny blue house. After they knocked a little girl about five years old opened the door.

"Hi James," greeted the little girl.

"Hi Ariel, where's Sky?" Asked James.

"I'll go get her." Replied Ariel. After what seemed like forever of just sitting on the tiny steps of the house Ariel came back.

"She's coming," said Ariel. Just after that Sky came out.

"Ahhhhh! Sky it's you!" Ray dropped her bags, crying and ran to hug Sky.

"Ray you came!" Sky yelled as she hugged back.

"Sky we must go back across the river!" Urged Ray.

"No! Ray we can't go home. This is better than where we were. Ray nooooo!" Exclaimed Sky.

"Yes we have to go back. No one knows what happened to you," answered Ray.

"Okay well, I wasn't kidnaped, just to let you know..... Okay don't get mad," Sky said as Ray just nodded her head. "Well I was wandering around at night cuz I heard something and wanted to find out what it was so I went and I wanted to go across the river cuz I was curious and I got here and liked it and didn't want to go back." Sky gasped trying to catch her breath.

"Sky! Why would you do that! You can't go out like that, especially at night you could have died!" screamed Ray

"I would have not died. The river was not that cold to cross and I'm six years old, I'm not that young and I can swim, and you said you wouldn't get mad." replied Sky, glaring at Ray.

"Okay okay fine I'm not mad at least you're safe, and.... We can stay." Said Ray while hugging Sky again.

"Yes!!!! We can stay!!!!" Cheered Sky.

"Only because I don't want to go back either." Added Ray. With that Ray settled into the house that Sky was staying at and were both soon adopted by a middle aged woman that had been thrown into that same side.
